

John Thomas is a senior policy analyst with the US EPA Office of Sustainable Communities. He received a Masters in Urban Planning from Cornell University and a PhD from the University of California Berkeley. Over the past 15 years he's worked on sustainable transportation at the Federal level, provided technical assistance to local governments, and taught graduate level courses related to smart growth. He also serves on various national advisory panels related to sustainable development, climate change and transportation.